

Wood pasture is perhaps one of the least modified communities by man. A proven sustainable system.

It has provided an often unique biological community, visible and invisible, above and below ground for millennia.

